INTRODUCTION

The Andrew Jackson Donelson Papers, 1799-1898, are centered around Andrew Jackson Donelson (1799-1871), U. S. Army Officer (aide-de-camp to Andrew Jackson), Tennessee lawyer, confidential secretary to Jackson (1824-1836), representative of the United States in negotiations with the Republic of Texas (1845), Minister to Prussia and the German Confederation (1846-1849), editor of the Washington Union (1851-1852), Vice-Presidential nominee on the Fillmore ticket (1856), and planter. The materials in this finding aid measure .42 linear feet.

The Andrew Jackson Donelson Papers are the property of the Tennessee Historical Society. Single photocopies may be made for purposes of scholarly research, but reproduction on a large scale is restricted.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Andrew Jackson Donelson Papers, containing approximately 150 items, span the period 1799-1898. The collection consists of accounts, correspondence, legal documents, land records, school records, and slave deeds.

The accounts include bills and receipts for sales and loans, and I. O. U. (1844) from A. J. Donelson to U. S. Representative Cave Johnson of Tennessee, and claims against the government for damage done by Federal troops to the property of William Alexander Donelson.

The land records contain entries, indentures, surveys, tax receipts, a power-of-attorney, and a record of sale due to tax payment failure. These concern A. J. Donelson, James G. Martin, Elizabeth Donelson, John Donelson, Lemuel Donelson, and Stockly Donelson.

Also in the collection are legal papers of William Alexander Donelson, school records of Martin Donelson, slave deeds of William Donelson, and an engraving for the Dollar Magazine entitled "Inauguration of William Henry Harrison, President of the United States, March 4, 1841."

Most of the collection is correspondence, the majority being the incoming and outgoing (1824-1870) of Andrew Jackson Donelson. His chief correspondents included: Donelson's daughter, Mary Emily (Donelson) Wilcox; his son-in-law, John A. Wilcox; and his sons, Andrew Jackson Donelson, Jr., Daniel S. Donelson, and Martin Donelson. In addition to the correspondence of family members, there is one letter of Samuel H. Laughlin and one from A. J. Donelson to Martin Van Buren, both regarding politics and worthy of note. The most prominent topic dealt with in the correspondence is United States politics, ranging in subject from political favors to the Bank of the United States. Mary Emily Wilcox, in her letters, related her interesting impressions during her trip to Italy, and also commented on the possibilities of Sam Houston's running for President of the United States. In addition to the letters of Andrew Jackson Donelson are those of Andrew Jackson Donelson, Jr. and Martin Donelson. Description of routine and life at Washington University (in St. Louis) and St. Louis University, as well as problems later encountered in farming (such as finding reliable and efficient laborers), are discussed by Martin in his letters.
